

Migration to the Americas

Map: Shows Beringia, the Land Bridge, between Asia and North America.

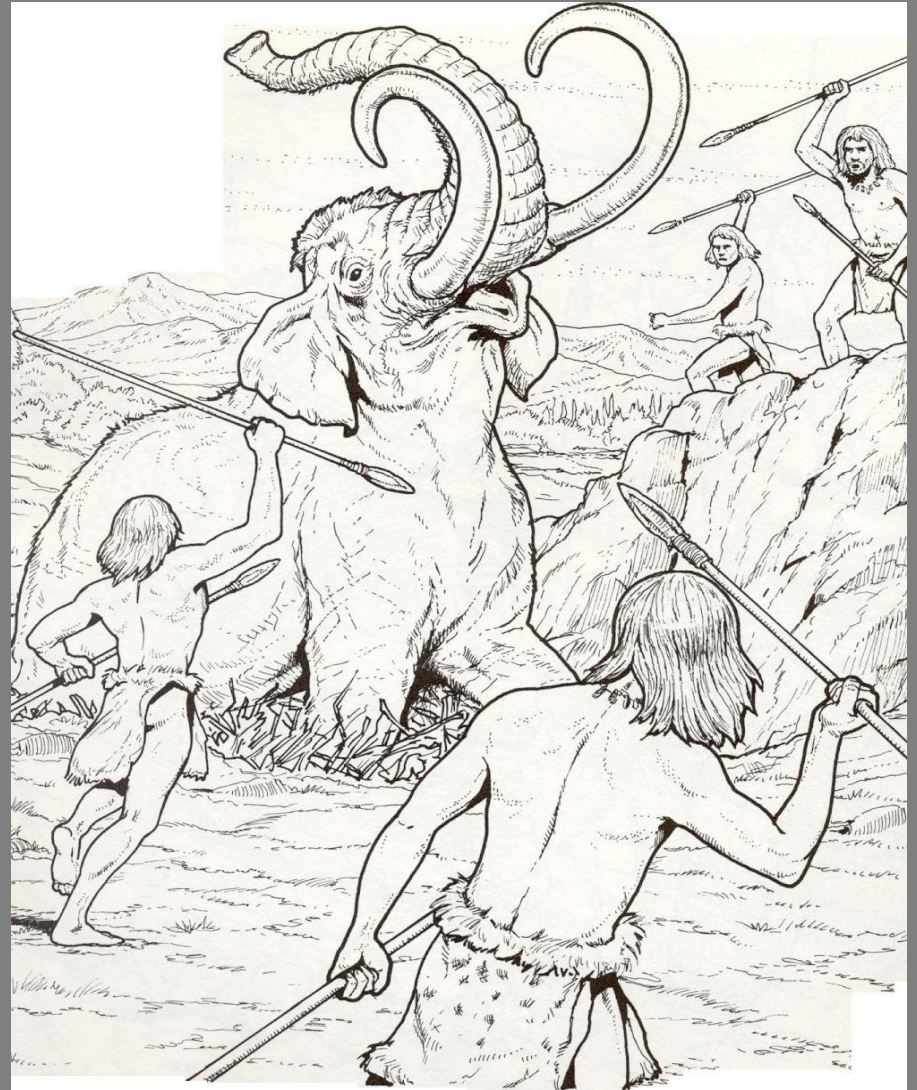

Map: The map shows the routes that animals and nomadic humans took as they moved into the Americas from Asia.

North America's Ice Age Animals About 18,000 Years Ago

Drawing: The drawing shows a group of nomadic humans crossing over Beringia into the Americas.

Drawing: The drawing shows the hunters working together in a group to kill the mammoth.

The development of agriculture drastically changed the ways of life for these early people.

In the Americas, farming first developed in Central America. Over thousands of years, the ability to farm would spread to all parts of North and South America.

Sources:

All pictures were obtained from:
www.gloversvilleschools.org